

UPDATE 4: Update on Wayne Boil Water Advisory – 1st Round Test Results Come Back Clear

May 27, 2023

The first round of test results taken by the Great Lakes Water Authority (GLWA) have come back clear for the City of Wayne and parts of Romulus, Westland and Inkster in the water system under a boil water advisory since Friday, May 26.

While these results are an indication that there is nothing wrong with the water, the Michigan Department of Environment, Great Lakes and Energy (EGLE) requires the boil water advisory remain in effect until the second round of testing returns clear.

A second round of test results will be returned on Sunday, and upon a second clear result, GLWA will lift the boil water advisory.

GLWA took the precautionary measure of issuing the boil water advisory on the evening of Friday due to the loss of pressure in the water distribution system caused by an equipment malfunction from a power outage, which is under investigation. Whenever a water system loses pressure for any significant length of time, the precautionary measure of a boil water advisory is recommended.

GLWA will provide additional updates as they are available.
